

Welding Alloys Group Update

Coronavirus (COVID-19)

As COVID-19 is spreading around the world, and a global pandemic has been announced by the World Health Organisation, the Welding Alloys Group has put extensive measures and restrictions in place to protect our customers, suppliers, employees and families during this challenging time.

Every business and market has been affected by the COVID-19 virus. It has left many companies facing an uncertain future and this will undoubtedly have a long-term impact to the way we all operate in the coming months and years.

That said, we are determined to do the very best we can to continue to serve our customers with outstanding products and services, as far as the economic conditions and government regulations allow. Here at the Welding Alloys Group we believe that if we do our utmost to protect our staff, by implementing rigorous workplace practices around hygiene, eliminating all physical contact, working from home where possible, and social distancing, we will by extension protect their families, and all of our business partners.

Prevention, prevention, prevention!

All of our staff have been provided with new working practices to adhere to, and all the knowledge they require to minimise the risk of infection. Anyone that can work from home, is working from home. We are also keeping a close eye on developments as they happen, and implementing new safety measures as soon as recommended by government health agencies around the world, to help contain the spread of COVID-19.

Whilst it certainly isn't "business as usual" at this time, you can depend on "Welding Alloys as usual" as every single one of us is determined to adhere to our commitments to Quality Excellence and Service Excellence that our customers have become accustomed to. Even if our staff are not in the office, they are working nevertheless, and will respond to your emails and phone calls promptly - that is our pledge.

If you have any questions or concerns related to this message, please email info@welding-alloys.com where your email will be answered immediately.

Wishing all of our business partners around the world a safe and healthy remainder to the year.

Best wishes
